Robert Kendall, E. O. Wood, and Trishe Smith ---Page Break--- ---Page Break--- TABLE OF CONTENTS Introduction Itinerary of Cruises Participating Scientific Personnel Methods Ship Acknowledgments Figures and Tables Data Page ---Page Break--- ---Page Break--- INTRODUCTION. The hydrographic data of this report were collected as part of an intensive effort to determine the basic oceanographic characteristics off three contiguous land regions along the north coast of Puerto Rico - Tortuguero, Punta Manatí, and Islote (see Figure 1). The area covered by sampling was approximately 26 kilometers alongshore by 10 kilometers offshore. The cruises were designed to sample during each quarter of the year for 1973 and 1974 in order to establish seasonal characteristics. One of the eight cruises monitored short-term changes (samples every 2 hours for one day) at one station only (ISL 3.7A, see Figure 1). ITINERARY OF CRUISES The stations sampled are indicated in the Figures and their respective position coordinates are listed in Table 1. Figures 2 through 8 indicate the chronological order of sampling of stations on each cruise. The data and time of sampling for each station are indicated on the Figures. The sampling periods are: 29 January - 1 February 1973 10-12 May 6-8 August 29-30 August (station ISL 3.7A only) 24-28 January 1974 25-24 May 116 August 30 October - 1 November The data is presented in chronological order. PARTICIPATING SCIENTIFIC PERSONNEL. The following persons participated in the various cruises. In some instances, cruise members were primarily engaged in other sampling programs as indicated. Tortuguero and Manatí, 29 January - 1 February 1973, E. Wood - Chief Scientist M. Young with D. Martin - Chief Biologist S. Martin J. Kovarna - Cruise Leader A.

Stuart Tortuguero, Manati and Islote, 30 October - 1 November 1974 E. Wood - Chief Scientist J. Montalvo, G. Johnson, S. Pedersen, J. Stuart, P. Yoshioka (benthos) ---Page Break --- METHODS. Classical methods were used for sampling and analyzing seawater. Samples were collected at standard depths of 0, 10, 25, 50, 100, 150, 200, 250, and 300 meters, limited only by sea floor depth. The samples were analyzed for temperature (Celsius), salinity (parts per thousand), dissolved oxygen, reactive phosphate, and reactive nitrate (off Islote only). Standard hydrographic casts were made from the research ship LUMO. Niskin and Nansen bottles were suspended alternately in stainless steel hydrographic wire and tripped at depth with messengers. Salinity samples were drawn into 250 ml Nalgene saltwater aged bottles and analyzed on shore with a Beckman Induction salinometer. Dissolved oxygen was drawn into 250 ml BOD bottles, pickled with manganous sulfate reagent, potassium iodide solution, and sulfuric acid, and analyzed on board by the standard Winkler titration method.

Samples for nitrates and nitrites, and phosphates were drawn into 500 ml and 125 ml Nalgene bottles respectively, frozen, and analyzed on shore using standard procedures. Temperature was measured by Kahl reversing thermometers (both protected and unprotected) accompanying each Miskin or Nansen bottle. A minimum of three minutes was allowed for thermometer equilibration at depth prior to reading. Vertical profiles of temperature versus depth at the deeper stations were obtained from a bathythermograph lowered to 300 meters. The R.F. PALUMBO was built by TATCO Shipbuilding Corporation in San Diego, California in 1971 for the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission. This ship is 95.5 feet in length, has a net displacement of 275 tons, and with its 350 horsepower Caterpillar diesel engine cruises at 10 knots. The R.F. PALUMBO has its home port at Guanajibo Bay next to the city of Mayagüez, Puerto Rico. The ship was under the command of David Green, Captain USN (retired) throughout 1973-1974. ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS. The data collection and this report were funded by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission and the Puerto Rico Water Resources Authority. Strickland, J. O. and T. R. Parsons (1965).
